Presentation Guidelines, ASM 2018

This year ASM invites proposals for both panel presentations and poster presentations.

Panels

We strongly encourage teams of three or more presenters to collaborate and submit proposals for panel sessions focused around a shared theme. Each panel session will last 2 hours. Panel sessions can take a wide variety of formats, including formal paper presentations, roundtable discussions, and book or film discussions. Formal paper presentations can be accompanied by respondents or panel discussion. The panel organizer should submit a session title, 300-word abstract, and a list of participants. In addition, each panelist should individually submit a presentation proposal.

If you have questions about formulating a panel proposal, or if you are interested in leading or presenting on a panel but need help connecting with other presenters, contact Arun Jones (arun.w.jones@emory.edu) and Alison Fitchett Climenhaga (afitchet@nd.edu).

We also invite proposals for high-quality papers not associated with a formally proposed panel session. While we prioritize papers associated with a proposed panel session, as space permits we will also accept independently submitted papers.

In most cases, each presenter will have 20 minutes to present, followed by 10 minutes of discussion. Paper drafts will be due June 1, 2018.

Poster Presentations

This year, we are excited to offer poster presentations, geared toward senior and junior scholars and practitioners. Each presenter will prepare a single slide communicating the central arguments and findings of their work. Presenters will each give a "lightening talk" (3-5 minutes), followed by ample time for discussion. This forum is ideal both for developing works-in-progress and sharing research findings. This forum offers participants the opportunity to present their work to a wide range of peers, and learn about the breadth of missiological research and practice represented within the ASM community.

The deadline for all presentation proposal submissions is January 23, 2018
