This year ASM invites proposals for both panel presentations and poster presentations.

Panels
We strongly encourage teams of three or more presenters to collaborate and submit proposals for panel sessions focused around a shared theme. Each panel session will last 2 hours. Panel sessions can take a wide variety of formats, including formal paper presentations, roundtable discussions, and book or film discussions. Formal paper presentations can be accompanied by respondents or panel discussion. The panel organizer should submit a session title, 300-word abstract, and a list of participants. In addition, each panelist should individually submit a presentation proposal.

In most cases, each panel presenter will have 15 minutes to present, followed by 15 minutes of discussion. Paper drafts will be due May 31, 2019.

If you have questions about formulating a panel proposal, or if you are interested in leading or presenting on a panel but need help connecting with other presenters, contact Madge Karecki (mmkarecki@outlook.com) and Shari Madkins (shari.madkins@emory.edu).

We also invite proposals for high-quality papers not associated with a formally proposed panel session. While we prioritize papers associated with a proposed panel session, as space permits, we will also accept independently submitted papers.

Works-in-Progress
This year, we are excited to offer works-in-progress, geared toward those who are amid research and can benefit from peer feedback. Each presenter will prepare a single slide communicating the central arguments and findings of their work. Presenters will each give a “lightening talk” (3-5 minutes), followed by ample time for discussion. This forum is ideal both for developing works-in-progress and sharing research findings. This forum offers junior and senior scholars alike the opportunity to present their work to a wide range of peers, and learn about the breadth of missiological research and practice represented within the ASM community.

The deadline for all presentation proposal submissions is January 25, 2019
