ASM invites proposals for panel sessions, individual papers, and works-in-progress presentations.

Panel Sessions

We strongly encourage teams of three or more presenters to collaborate and submit proposals for panel sessions focused around a shared theme. Most panel sessions will last 2 hours. (A few 90-minute panels sessions will be available, too.) Panel sessions can take a wide variety of formats, including formal paper presentations, roundtable discussions, and book or film discussions. Formal paper presentations can be accompanied by respondents or panel discussion. The panel organizer should submit a session title, 300-word abstract, and a list of participants.

For panels involving paper presentations, the panel organizer should also gather and submit together titles and 300-word abstracts for each paper that will feature in the panel via the “panel proposal form.” (Note: this differs from last-year’s procedure for submitting panel proposals.)

In most cases, each panel presenter will have 20 minutes to present, followed by 10 minutes of discussion. Paper drafts will be due May 31, 2020.

If you have questions about formulating a panel proposal, or if you are interested in leading or presenting on a panel but need help connecting with other presenters, contact Roberta King (rking@fuller.edu) and Shari Madkins (shari.madkins@emory.edu).

Individual Papers

We also invite proposals for high-quality papers not associated with a formally proposed panel session. While we prioritize papers associated with a proposed panel session, as space permits, we will also accept independent papers and place them in panel groups.

Works-in-Progress

We are excited once again to offer works-in-progress, geared toward those who are amid research and can benefit from peer feedback. Each presenter will prepare a single slide communicating the central arguments and findings of their work. Presenters will each give a “lightning talk” (3-5 minutes), followed by ample time for discussion. This forum is ideal both for developing works-in-progress and sharing research findings. This forum offers junior and senior scholars alike the opportunity to present their work to a wide range of peers, and learn about the breadth of missiological research and practice represented within the ASM community.

The deadline for all presentation proposal submissions is January 24, 2020

ASM welcomes presentations from graduate students. While most grad students who present are doctoral students, we are happy to receive proposals from qualified masters students, accompanied by a brief note of recommendation from a professor familiar with their work. Please send notes to Roberta King (rking@fuller.edu) and Shari Madkins (shari.madkins@emory.edu).
